Nancy,

As I mentioned last week, I'm traveling this week. I was trying to call in but I have a meeting starting at 3 pacific (4 mountain) that is good my to prevent me from doing so.

For what it's worth, I think we really need to do something to make sure that things get served by the courts, especially when pro se parties are involved. I like the issued language insofar as it accommodates even those things that may be drafted by one party or they other for court consideration. If there are things that don't make sense to include, like writs, supplemental orders, etc. we should find a way to exclude those but then make clear that the party seeking those writs/orders are required to serve them.

As for orders to show cause, I've never understood why the court doesn't issue and serve those as the "party" whose orders are not being followed. But perhaps I don't fully understand the process or why this is not workable.

Thanks,

Mike
